V-Publication

We, the staff of the Victory Publication of 1943, have attempted to show within these pages the life of Central students during the historic school year of September, 1942, to June, 1943. Each day this year, we at Central have learned to appreciate our freedom more than ever before. Rights that were once taken for granted are now cherished by all. We have learned what living in a democracy really means, and we are proud to be Americans. This is our second year of war, and we at Central have felt this second year of war more than the first, as it has in some way reached all of us. Anyone who visits our school today sees many changes from the school of one year ago. The Victory Corps and new courses of study have been established to train us for various branches of service; our Student Union has put on special sales of War Bonds and Stamps; and many of our clessmates have left to serve our country.

Bur / Fearly Reappeller Manley Two years ago this book was called the Centralia Annual or Yearbook; last year it was called the Victory Annual because it was our first school year of war; but this year, because there have been many changes made in our school, and therefore in this book, we now have the Victory Publication which is one-half the size of our usual annual.

Within these pages we have tried to give you a review, to remember always, of your life here at Central High School.

On behalf of the January and June class graduates, we, the staff members, give you the 1943 Victory Publication.

Education for a Free World

When Charles Beard, the historian, was asked what he had learned from history, he said simply, "When it gets darkest, the stars come out."

When it was darkest for the cause of free men, when England was standing alone against the forces of Axis tyranny, President Roosevelt, speaking before the Congress of the United States, pointed out the stars—stars of freedom. Today these same stars of freedom guide the United Nations on in their fight against the Axis countries.

These stars of liberty are four in number, the rights of all men everywhere in the world. Freedom of speech and expression, freedom of religion, freedom from fear.

President Roosevelt has said, "The four freedoms of common humanity are as much elements of man's needs, as air and sunlight, bread and salt. Deprive him of all of these freedoms and he dies—deprive him of a part of them and he withers."

The four freedoms spell for us the creed of the United Nations as they press forward to final victory over totalitarianism and all that it stands for. They are the fundamental principles of the kind of post-war world we seek.

When the war is over, we must replace the Axis belief in totalitarianism with something more fundamentally human. Experience has taught us that unless we teach them to live peaceably side by side with the rest of the world democracy will never be free from fear of aggression.

The key to peace and progress for the post-war order is organization and education for a free world. The democratic support for universal organization will rise from a knowledge of the interdependence of mankind and the true facts of the world in which we live.

And even if the underlying causes of war are not immediately eliminated, the intelligence and understanding developed by true education will tip the scales in favor of freedom from fear, everywhere in the world.

Tonight we are graduating in times of great crisis. It is worthwhile to keep in mind that the Chinese write the word "crisis" with two characters, one of which means danger and the other opportunity. When the war is won, we of the younger generation will be confronted with the danger of more war, more dictatorship, and more depression. We, however, are not afraid; for also ahead of us is the opportunity to meet the challenge of one day—to help avoid these plagues of mankind, to build a better world, and to insure the conditions for a just and durable peace.

Education at War

We, the January class of 1943, are graduating into a world entirely new and strange to the one in which we lived during our period of high school education. Momentous changes in our way of living are taking place on every side; changes in our plans, our habits, and our thinking. These changes are being reflected in modern education. Education today has the added responsibility of building a strong, invincible, victorious America. — — —

The aim of education during this war is: first, to provide men equipped with the proper instruction and materials to win the war; second, to raise American morale and to keep the people of America strong and healthy. Our educational system is equipped to do this difficult task. The policy of education for the masses here in America has given our educators the background that is needed to complete this job swiftly, effectively, and successfully.

This policy, I believe, has made us—the graduating high school class—far better prepared for life than are the youth of the Axis nations. They may know far more about killing, fighting, and living on the battlefronts of the world today; but we American youth with a wide general education behind us can quickly adapt ourselves to such conditions; and when the war is over return to the democratic way of living practiced by us here in high school.

The Axis youth will not know how to live in a free world. We have been taught how to live democratically and peacefully with others. The Axis youth have been only taught how to kill and hate others. No wonder we here on the stage thank you for providing us with this opportunity for a free education—an education which has well prepared us to meet the situation that now faces the youth of today. With the experiences provided us here in Bay City Central we will be able to enter quickly into the war effort and with a little more intensive training to fill the many specialized positions in America's armed forces or war industries.

Some members of our class who should be graduating here with us this evening have already left to do their humble part for our country in the armed forces. — — —

Many more of our class will have to make sacrifices within the next few years, and undoubtedly some the supreme sacrifice.

In view of these unpleasant but necessary circumstances we, the Victory Class of 1943, have dedicated our lives to the proposition:

We must win this war and insure lasting peace, prosperity and security to the whole world.

JANUARY CLASS PROPHECY

Annette Anderson, because of her leadership ability, is now a Captain in the W.A.A.C. Margaret Anderson is now nestled in her little bungalow caring for Jr. Talk about patriotic! Bessie Campbell is now assistant whistletooter at the Grand Trunk station, thus freeing a man for military duty. Remember the little man who held the little vellow sign in front of school? He's not there any more. Donna Ehler has taken over. Ada Gaudreau has completed her studies at the New York Academy of Dancing. She entertains at Army camps in the sixth corps area. Vivian Gorsline and Elaine Lang are co-editors of the Gabber-Moreth Gazette. Who knows, it might break up one of these days. Guess it's the WAACS. Royal Hildebrant and Margaret Goss are now Marinettes. Alice Gregory is the beauty of tin pan alley. Nina Harbourne is busy giving GI Manicures to Bernice Hotchkiss and Jane Hohman, fellow WAACS, Irene Harvatin, assisted by Shirley Headington, is Chief Chef for the Spars.

Ruthie Immerman is busy teaching country kiddies the three R's; "right, rong and ritual". Pat Johnson has perfected a new Christmas tree ornament. What used to be called tinsel is now called "Ansel". Yera Kerkau is the star of the newly formed bowling team; namely, the "Huskers". Lucille Newart and Dorothea Lamkin have taken the place of Mutt and Jeff in the comic strip. Rita Klaiber, Dorothy Krager, Margaret Madigan and Helen Piskos are the featured hill-billy quartet over station HOOEY, Crump. Pearl Kranen is now the pearl in every sailor's oyster. Phyllis Loeffert and Rose Lee Thomas are linemen in the Army. Each has to keep her waistline down. Mary MacDonald is busy making hash out of yesterday's leftovers. Rosy Mohelski is working at Lockheed as a riveter. Bettie Meyers is still Mary Lee's "old faithful". Eunice Nampa, because of her entertaining ability, is chairman of entertainment for the U.S.O. She likes it, tool Do you blame her, girls?

Katherine Neal, Arlene Stein, Bernadine Woiciechowski, and Dorothy Whitney are hostesses at the U.S.O. Anne Russell relieves the minds of defense workers by singing them to work. Marilyn Norling and Mary Jane Phillips are playing the role of cab drivers for the duration. Bettie Schaefer is hat-check girl at the Broadway Bar. Could that be why Joe has so many different hats? Gerry Schaefer is still trying to start a Women's Army Air Corps. Peg Schaefer is that No. I model of Bay City's own Mill End Store. E. Scheddel and Esther Smallwood are designing zoot-suits for women warworkers. Vashta Smith spends most of her time rolling bandages for Red Cross. Elaine Staley portrays the part of Juliet in the stage show running at the CITY THEATER. Beatrice Stanton, and Harriett VanHyfte are frantically campaigning for bigger and better coffee beans. Gracie Wecher is now instructing girls in the art of acquiring and maintaining those "come hither" personalities. Phyllis Williston is vocalist for Earl Gardener's band. Mariorie Asman spends her time listening for airplane motors. He's in the Army Air Force now, you know. Ermy Ball has graduated from candy counter to box office at the new Munger Theater.

JANUARY CLASS PROPHECY

Jessianna Bateman is now manager of Mary Lee's. June Berg has married that handsome fellow (?) and supports a small family. Altha Brookhouse, with her numerous talents, is "still around". What about it, "Musclebound"? Hazel Byfield and Norma Tenent are professional dancers. Bethany Carrier's theme song has been "Jim". She sings it all day long. June Dietrich is still going around with that dreamy look in her eye. How long is it now, June? Alice Ebelt has settled as Mr. Kern's secretary. Elizabeth Etue is a hostess, especially for a St. Joe boy. Marcella Figley is still giving parties for Central football players. Betty Ford is saving her Nichols to buy a home-(er).

Lionel Ames, now an Apprentice Seaman, U. S. Navy, is attending Bay City Junior College under the Navy's V-I program. Harry Bacon, holding down the fort with his Mary Kay, is still wondering if he has a job at the Bay City Hardware. Vernon Begick hereby applies for deferment for farm labor. John Bourne, hoping to be assigned to the Air Force, hereby applies for induction. Robert Cederberg, our debating class president, still is hanging around. Robert Clark, the class trumpeter, is hereby ordered to report for induction as a bugler in the Army. Wight Cooke is still cooking with gas-he holds a "C" ration book. Cal Cummins, having learned the cobbling trade, is ordered to report to his nearest Marine recruiting office. They want him for a "boot" repairman. Clarke Cummings, our class debater, has left for Washington. He plans to debate with Wendell Willkie about the war effort. Samuel Fair III. that stalwart-looking football player is rejected and reclassified 4-F. He had flat feet and a flat head. Jack Farner just passed his mental exam for the Air Forces. He wants to be a pilot. The Army has different plans. Walt Fitzhugh, that flashy auto salesman, was rejected by Draft Board No. 2. He couldn't pass the difficult physical. Mike Furland, now known as "muscle-bound Mike," is still tossing beer cases at Maxie Treau's. He was reclassified to 4-F. Robert Hillman volunteered for induction and at present is an airplane "grease-ball."

Willie Howard, possessing the necessary qualifications for a horseman, will be inducted into the U. S. Cavalry next month. John Joiner, having worked as an errand boy in the neighborhood apothecary, has been selected for the U. S. Navy's Pharmacist Mates School. The Army has a place for "Doc" Foster. They want him to blow up the tires on the Flying Fortresses with hot air. Ed Heinz has been accepted for the paratroopers school of the Army. Alfred Lowe is still a mystery to Capt. William F. Santelmann, leader of the Marine Band. Andy Piesik has volunteered for induction into the U. S. Army. Albert Stachowick is a P. F. C. in the U. S. Marines at Munger, George Waldron is still managing to escape the draft and has many girl friends?? Bill Lambert has been allowed to enlist as a Naval Aviation Cadet. Andy Klepser has been deferred as essential to the Kroger Grocery Business. Scott Pope is still debating with his "top kick" on why he was inducted into the Infantry. Jack Thomson has been sent to Officer Candidates' School of the U. S. Navy as a deck or engineering officer. Frank Robison is attending the meteorology school of the Army Air Corps. Stuart Nicholson has been inducted into the Cavalry (mechanized) because of his experience with autos and motorcycles. Milton Lutren has been rejected by the Navy because he was too "tall." Hayden Pierson, Robert Mehnert, and Robert Moorehead are ordered to report for induction. Don Matthews, Warren Loranger, and Bill Smith reported at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station right after graduation. Smith wants to work under his former radio instructor. Elliot Barr.

Alexander Toyzan, recuperating from a very serious operation, has been given a six months' deferment in order to strengthen his mind for the Army. Edward Tobin. that seeing-eye dog of the varsity squad, has been rejected by the Army because he had such superior eyesight that he could see everything. Wayne Liekert has been assigned a new tank, this time a heavy tank, in the hope that he won't smash it up so easily. This is his third since his induction. Robert Laderach, a Seaman in the Navy since graduation, has been given a furlough so that he might explain to his draft board about his enlistment. Eugene Krieg, deferred for six months as a dentist, has been re-classified into I-A. Walt Keeler, the varsity captain of '42, was rejected as too physically fit for duty with the Army, Leonard Kaczorowski has been accepted for the Coast Guard as a volunteer. Here's where he can use his Sea Scouting. Ronald Pawlak has just gotten over the last fake announcement that was handed him at the last minute. He's now doing work for the Treasury Dep't in their Radio Recording Division. Of course, all work is donated. Bill Stange finally is able to use that clarinet playing (?) he did in school. The Coast Guard put him on a bell buoy as a fog-horn; saves strategic metals! Gilbert Lalonde has been appointed to the Military Academy at West Point by our Congressman. He's a good Mathematician anyhow, Howard Webb is attending Kenyon College at the expense of the Government, Hi! Ya! Private. How do you like the Air Corps now? Stanley Vallendar, working at the Sugar plant, got too much under his belt one day. Now he's classified 2-B. Clarence. our class poet, gave up trying to volunteer for the Army as an interpretor when his draft board inducted him for the infantry. Now he might prove to be another "Joyce Kilmer."

Education In a Democracy

A democracy, to survive, must have an intelligent citizenry. We of the June class of "1943" are beginning to realize now that our school life has been dedicated to that end. None of us, in the past, thought much of what we were attempting, through able guidance, to accomplish here at Central. But now, as we are about to leave its protecting walls, comes the full realization of education's attainments.

We remember the surge of loyalty that went through us at all school gatherings. That spirit will not be lost now. We have obtained a high sense of just fidelity—a sense that has led us also to be true upholders and believers in our country, our government, our community, and our homes. We were ready to serve our land in time of peace, and are even more ready to serve it in time of crisis. Many of our number will leave soon for service in the armed forces, while others are ready for work on the home front. Knowledge of school obligations has brought knowledge of country obligations with the identical feeling of loyalty.

America has been called the "melting pot of the world." Was not, then, this class a miniature melting pot? How many classes, creeds, races, types of people have been represented here? And yet, through our peaceful years of friendly rivalry together has developed an essence of complete cooperation. Shall we not then be prepared for the same cooperation within our community and within the world? We cannot say that we have been tolerant of others, for there can be no tolerance when there is no perception of differences. Our close contacts with one another have prepared us for cooperation and tolerance elsewhere.

The time will soon come when we will have an even greater need for these qualities—loyalty, tolerance, sense of cooperation. We are living in a rich land, a land that, in comparison with others, has been touched only lightly by the turmoil throughout the world. And soon we must be prepared to share with every nation what we are fighting for now. The Four Freedoms have been a part of our everyday life here at school. We have been able to "live" them. Who could say that there was not freedom for speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want, freedom from fear every single day of the past years? We know these freedoms are worth-while because we have experienced them, and thus it is through our education that we are ready to share them.

We do not leave this part of our life bewilderingly. We do not know what is ahead, but we are ready to face whatever comes. We have developed a social poise—a world political knowledge—an economic capacity. We could not have done it alone, but we, the June class of 1943, with the faculty and administration have done it together.

Objectives of Education

June

Honor

We of the June graduating class of 1943 have completed twelve years of formal education. Our education has been presented to us freely and gladly. What we have absorbed will be reflected in our individual lives. The objectives intended were three-fold; namely, to socialize, to teach a vocation, and to teach intrinsic values.

The first objective is that of socialization. Our democracy is founded on the ideal of equality among men. Our teachers have endeavored to instill in us a sense of equality and tolerance through the co-educational public school system. It is the function of the school to continue, supplement, and sometimes correct the influence of family life in order that the student may take his part in the conserving and developing of life in the community. Thus a school must be a genuine society, inspired by the best ideals and therefore able to transmit to list students the traits which enter into those ideals.

In the second place the school must offer its students instruction in a number of skilled occupations. The utilitarian demands of the day and of the community must be considered. These demands are constantly changing because America experiences a steady substitution of new ideas instead of a multiplication of old ones. Several months of war succeeded where as many years of peace may have failed in bringing about a change in school curriculum. The school must not only be able to produce the skilled workers that the present demands but also must help the student adjust himself to the situations and prepare him for his life work.

A liberal education will bring the student into contact with these elements which are thought to have the most enduring and vital significance in the historic life of the people. It should help make him sensitive to the intellectual and social movements of the modern world. It should help him to develop an appreciation for the more beautiful things in life.

Education has been called the bulwark of democracy. If we, the senior class of 1943, have attained those three objectives in our education, then we are ready to take our place as men and women of a democracy.

Bob Koch is Mercury's second, Art Hugo is athletic director of the Y. M. C. A., Don Kusch is football assistant at Central, and Bert Warren has gone to England to perfect his accent. Ray Joseph runs the E-Lite Women's Apparel Company, and Tom Hartwig is being trained by Milton Laleman for the featherweight championship bout. Bob Reinbold uses his head, modeling for non-rub hair tonic, and George Feighner has revolutionized the tooth paste industry. Dick Gilbert is as close to a butch as he can be-he's bald. Leo La Londe and Orval Ancel are playing for the Detroit Tigers, while Dan Ebel is a New York tailor

Betty Lou Haithman sings in Carnegie Hall. Mary Mindykowski and Irene Linkowski run a jitterbug studio. Leona Pollum advertises Welch's grape juice, Romaine Megger and Mary Jane Urban have acquired diamond rings, Myrtle Reid is a second Falstaff from Allen's Alleys, and Russ Callender stills sells Ca Va Ju juice to Elaine Kerkau, who runs a grocery store. John List is in the Quartermaster Corps. Warren Lindsay and Ed Huff are still trying to figure out how they got out of school, while Jimmy Baird is still in school planning fun assemblies. Art Anderson is now a lawyer and Robert Bennet is head waiter at the Stork Club. Irene Pfundt and Irene Williams are hostesses for the Coast Guards. Wanda Kozak is a doctor's assistant. Wanda Koperski and Kathleen Schmidt run a five and dime. Marie Bujarski, Marjorie Wegener and Eugenia Wozniak have finally decided to be defense workers so that there wouldn't be any manpower shortage, while Anne Wisniewski and Madeline Pawlaczyk are competing to see who has the best figure. Lois Nystrom advertises for Chen Yu nail polish, while Helen McDermott paints the town red. Since Martha Bangert and Romaine Resmer have taken machine shop, they have given up their lily

Eldon Bergman and Joe Gwizdala run a political machine in Essexville. Wayne Krause has taken over Gasta's, and Ted Leix furnishes the ice cream, while Earl Sommers still calls the girls "sweetheart". Julian Wojewoda is still trying to keep his blond hair from attracting the girls, and Ray Babcock is head of Central's Spanish Department. Noreen Rowden works for Leo the Lion now, while Mary Ann Urbaniak writes detective stories for two-year-olds. Irene Wispenter runs Tommy's Garage. Kathleen Jereau and Eleanore Helminiak run a date service board. Bev Conway has given up the idea of ten husbands-she now has ten children. Virginia Ceglarek has advanced to soda jerker at Kresge's. Norine Benson runs a pawn shop, exclusively for jewelry. Maxine Freidenger has taken over Miss Hodgson's classes. Maxine Hartz is offering a ten weeks' course in Rhumba lessons guaranteed to banish the St. Vitus Dance. Marian Baker makes a lot of dough in a bakery. Elaine Hemingway set out to find Amelia Earhart. Art and Ed Gielda run a haberdashery on Columbus Avenue. Bill Congdon is the Air Corps' Fat-Stuff. Pearl Callender is still riding horses. Luella Guoan has a hopeless chest and so she advertises it every night for sale. Lois Grabner is a private governess. Eleanor Lewandowski owns the "Write a Letter to a Lonely Person and Make Him Happy" business. Aeldgytha Priem liked school so much she now runs a country school of her own. Virginia Stevens drives a truck for her dairy. Marian Traxler and Blanche Atherton sing the "Volga Boatman" in the Russian Casino. Marjorie Aurand is now living in the White House, William Meerdo has bank-nite every Wednesday in his movie theater.

Bob Buda is taking Gary Cooper's place in the movies. Marvin Anderson plays shortstop for Crump Tec. Adrian Agdanowski now owns his own pool room. Robert Kolanek now owns the A & P.

Vern Gliniecki has stumped the quiz kids. Louis Thurau is traveling in a circus as the Midget Man. Clara Benson is a hostess at a swanky night club. Dorothy Hays, because of her slight stature, works in a defense plant welding in the nose of an airplane. Mary Jablonski and Mabel Blakely teamed together to do a chorus act for the war workers. Lauretta Parent is still acting stubborn and so he will have to make the first move. Elaine Shaw has been promoted to dish washer at the Red Lion. Janice Young became a nurse so she could hold the soldier's hand. Mary Zerbey is still running around school trying to get chemistry experiments done. Leah Karse has received more degrees than any other living person.

Edith Lusher is hostess at the Republic Hotel. Norma Jean Rouche plays Cleopatra on the stage. Dorothy Rodde sings with Artie Shaw's band. Gerry Wieland is still waiting for Leonard. Jeannette Soitz runs a duck farm for daffy quacks. Jerry Yonke is in South America on a good-will tour. He finally learned how to speak Spanish. Eldon Kolka has given up trying to find the perfect woman. Milton Rose and Jack Wazney are still on the run but the girls seem to run faster. Chester Piesik runs a bowling alley exclusively for women bowlers. Bob Royal gave his blue blood to the Red Cross. Bob Borg is conductor of the Bad Axe Symphony Orchestra. Ed Samolewski works for the bus line. Tom Stark is an airraid warden with George Parker.

Lorraine Cieselski and Wanda Suchodolski are cowriski deep in the heart of Texas. Dorothy Szczepanski reads poetry over the radio. Donna Spracklin has pursued the field of higher education, while Pauline Zielinski finds out what happens to make your mind tick. Lorraine Trepkowski and Ernestin Roemer are Marinettes, as they liked the uniforms so well. Lois Heitzig is a drill sergeant in the WAACS. Gloria Webb runs a basketball team.
Serene Morris is saving her heart for Joe. La Valle
Rookus lives in a little white house with green shutters and not alone.

'TAINT CLASS

Ideas are formed on the campus during noon hours and between classes. It's the democratic way of life.

Buying war stamps has become an important part of student life.

Mrs. Carver discusses absenteeism with a group of Seniors. The importance of regular attendance is stressed.

A woman's place in the home is not overlooked as girls prepare to take over men's jobs. Adapting oneself to war conditions is a test of character.

ASSIGNMENTS

As editor of the school paper, Ruth Born often forms her Editor's Viewpoint during lunch hours

Teachers, as well as students, find informal group meetings lead to new ideas.

The majorettes are an attractive element when the band performs.

Mrs. Vanderwill and Mrs. Lanham are re-sponsible for the smooth-running school cafe-teria, while the orchestra plays its part in keeping students happy.
